

DOCUMENT 45

TOP 25 PERSONALIZED OUTREACH MESSAGE BOOK

Email • Follow-Up • LinkedIn • Phone • Response & Escalation Framework

Purpose: Give Student Fellows an account-specific communication starting point for the Top 25 executive prospects. These messages are not blind copy-and-paste scripts. Before use, the fellow must verify the current contact, corporate program, pathway and relevant public facts, then personalize the opening.

THE GOAL OF FIRST CONTACT IS A REPLY, REFERRAL OR MEETING — NOT A 10-PARAGRAPH SALES PITCH.

STANDARD FOLLOW-UP CADENCE

| Timing    | Action                                                                                             |
|-----------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Day 0     | Personalized first email through the verified pathway.                                             |
| Day 3-5   | Follow-Up #1 if no response; concise and value-based.                                              |
| Day 8-12  | LinkedIn or legitimate alternate channel where appropriate.                                        |
| Day 14-18 | Follow-Up #2; ask whether there is a better person/pathway.                                        |
| Day 21-30 | Final light-touch follow-up or move to nurture unless new signal appears.                          |
| Any time  | Stop or adjust sequence if prospect responds, asks not to be contacted, or provides a new process. |

1. JPMorganChase

Recommended subject: Student financial capability + community problem-solving in New York

Verified alignment to research before sending: financial health, youth financial education and economic opportunity.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of JPMorganChase specifically because of its work around financial health, youth financial education and economic opportunity. Our program is creating an opportunity for students interviewing local businesses, identifying real problems and developing solutions while building financial and entrepreneurial skills.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at JPMorganChase, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to JPMorganChase is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in financial health, youth financial education and economic opportunity.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at JPMorganChase.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching JPMorganChase because of its work in financial health, youth financial education and economic opportunity. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at JPMorganChase who handles partnerships related to financial health, youth financial education and economic opportunity. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page Challenge overview + sponsorship overview after interest, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                   |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not imply an existing JPMorganChase commitment or quote an unverified funding amount.

Escalate immediately when: Any executive referral, meeting request, grant/funding guidance or $50K+ discussion.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

2. Microsoft

Recommended subject: AI skills + student problem-solving partnership

Verified alignment to research before sending: AI literacy, educators, workforce readiness and nonprofit capacity.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of Microsoft specifically because of its work around AI literacy, educators, workforce readiness and nonprofit capacity. Our program is creating an opportunity for students learning to use AI responsibly as a tool for solving real community and business problems.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at Microsoft, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to Microsoft is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in AI literacy, educators, workforce readiness and nonprofit capacity.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at Microsoft.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching Microsoft because of its work in AI literacy, educators, workforce readiness and nonprofit capacity. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at Microsoft who handles partnerships related to AI literacy, educators, workforce readiness and nonprofit capacity. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; AI/technology partnership concept after interest, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                 |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not claim Microsoft has a grant available for this program.

Escalate immediately when: Any Microsoft Elevate/education referral, meeting, proposal request or major technology discussion.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

3. Google / Google.org

Recommended subject: Expanding AI opportunity through student problem-solving
Verified alignment to research before sending: AI skills, education and workforce opportunity.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of Google / Google.org specifically because of its work around AI skills, education and workforce opportunity. Our program is creating an opportunity for a youth movement that connects AI literacy with real-world problem solving, entrepreneurship and community impact.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at Google / Google.org, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to Google / Google.org is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in AI skills, education and workforce opportunity.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at Google / Google.org.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching Google / Google.org because of its work in AI skills, education and workforce opportunity. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at Google / Google.org who handles partnerships related to AI skills, education and workforce opportunity. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; tailored AI opportunity concept after fit is confirmed, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                           |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not imply eligibility for Google.org funding until verified.

Escalate immediately when: Any referral to Google.org/social impact, meeting request or request for formal proposal.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

4. Verizon

Recommended subject: Digital skills + youth community impact in New York

Verified alignment to research before sending: digital inclusion, STEM and youth technology skills.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of Verizon specifically because of its work around digital inclusion, STEM and youth technology skills. Our program is creating an opportunity for helping students build digital and problem-solving skills while working on challenges in their own communities.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at Verizon, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to Verizon is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in digital inclusion, STEM and youth technology skills.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at Verizon.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching Verizon because of its work in digital inclusion, STEM and youth technology skills. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at Verizon who handles partnerships related to digital inclusion, STEM and youth technology skills. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; technology/connectivity activation concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                       |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not present Verizon Innovative Learning as a funding promise.

Escalate immediately when: Any education/community team engagement, device/connectivity offer or $50K+ opportunity.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

5. IBM

Recommended subject: AI + workforce skills through real-world student challenges

Verified alignment to research before sending: AI, education, SkillsBuild and workforce development.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of IBM specifically because of its work around AI, education, SkillsBuild and workforce development. Our program is creating an opportunity for students developing AI-era problem-solving, communication and entrepreneurship skills through real community assignments.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at IBM, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to IBM is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in AI, education, SkillsBuild and workforce development.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at IBM.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching IBM because of its work in AI, education, SkillsBuild and workforce development. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at IBM who handles partnerships related to AI, education, SkillsBuild and workforce development. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; AI/workforce partnership concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                                 |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not claim the Challenge qualifies for a specific IBM RFP unless confirmed.

Escalate immediately when: Any SkillsBuild/social-impact referral, meeting or proposal request.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

6. Bank of America

Recommended subject: Youth leadership + economic mobility through community problem-solving
Verified alignment to research before sending: youth leadership, economic mobility and workforce readiness.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of Bank of America specifically because of its work around youth leadership, economic mobility and workforce readiness. Our program is creating an opportunity for students strengthening leadership and real-world skills by engaging businesses and communities.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at Bank of America, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to Bank of America is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in youth leadership, economic mobility and workforce readiness.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at Bank of America.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching Bank of America because of its work in youth leadership, economic mobility and workforce readiness. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at Bank of America who handles partnerships related to youth leadership, economic mobility and workforce readiness. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; economic mobility/youth leadership concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                       |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not treat published grant cycles as automatically open or applicable.

Escalate immediately when: Local market/foundation referral, meeting or significant funding discussion.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

7. Capital One

Recommended subject: Financial well-being + youth entrepreneurship opportunity
Verified alignment to research before sending: financial well-being, workforce and entrepreneurship.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of Capital One specifically because of its work around financial well-being, workforce and entrepreneurship. Our program is creating an opportunity for students learning how businesses work, identifying challenges and developing solutions that strengthen economic confidence.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at Capital One, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to Capital One is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in financial well-being, workforce and entrepreneurship.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at Capital One.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching Capital One because of its work in financial well-being, workforce and entrepreneurship. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at Capital One who handles partnerships related to financial well-being, workforce and entrepreneurship. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; financial education activation concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                           |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not overstate current grant availability.

Escalate immediately when: Community-impact referral, meeting or $50K+ conversation.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

8. Citi / Citi Foundation

Recommended subject: Youth employability + economic opportunity in New York

Verified alignment to research before sending: youth employability, financial inclusion and economic opportunity.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of Citi / Citi Foundation specifically because of its work around youth employability, financial inclusion and economic opportunity. Our program is creating an opportunity for students gaining practical communication, entrepreneurship and problem-solving experience through community engagement.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at Citi / Citi Foundation, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to Citi / Citi Foundation is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in youth employability, financial inclusion and economic opportunity.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at Citi / Citi Foundation.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching Citi / Citi Foundation because of its work in youth employability, financial inclusion and economic opportunity. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at Citi / Citi Foundation who handles partnerships related to youth employability, financial inclusion and economic opportunity. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; youth employability concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                                      |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not assume a Citi Foundation program accepts unsolicited proposals.

Escalate immediately when: Foundation/community referral, proposal invitation or executive meeting.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

9. American Express

Recommended subject: Young problem-solvers supporting stronger local communities

Verified alignment to research before sending: leadership, small business and community opportunity.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of American Express specifically because of its work around leadership, small business and community opportunity. Our program is creating an opportunity for students learning directly from local businesses and proposing solutions—connecting youth leadership with thriving communities.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at American Express, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to American Express is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in leadership, small business and community opportunity.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at American Express.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching American Express because of its work in leadership, small business and community opportunity. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at American Express who handles partnerships related to leadership, small business and community opportunity. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; entrepreneurship/small-business activation concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                               |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not imply endorsement or access to small-business customers.

Escalate immediately when: Corporate giving/small-business referral, meeting or proposal request.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

10. MetLife / MetLife Foundation

Recommended subject: Youth financial health + resilient communities

Verified alignment to research before sending: financial health and resilient communities.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of MetLife / MetLife Foundation specifically because of its work around financial health and resilient communities. Our program is creating an opportunity for students identifying community challenges and developing practical solutions while building financial and career awareness.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at MetLife / MetLife Foundation, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to MetLife / MetLife Foundation is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in financial health and resilient communities.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at MetLife / MetLife Foundation.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching MetLife / MetLife Foundation because of its work in financial health and resilient communities. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at MetLife / MetLife Foundation who handles partnerships related to financial health and resilient communities. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview only if requested through proper inquiry pathway, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                  |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not send an unsolicited proposal where the foundation directs prospects to its inquiry process.

Escalate immediately when: Any positive inquiry response or invitation to discuss alignment.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

11. Amazon / AWS

Recommended subject: AI, cloud and student problem-solving for the future workforce

Verified alignment to research before sending: AI, cloud, STEM, workforce and entrepreneurship.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of Amazon / AWS specifically because of its work around AI, cloud, STEM, workforce and entrepreneurship. Our program is creating an opportunity for students building future-ready skills by solving real problems in their neighborhoods and local businesses.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at Amazon / AWS, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to Amazon / AWS is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in AI, cloud, STEM, workforce and entrepreneurship.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at Amazon / AWS.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching Amazon / AWS because of its work in AI, cloud, STEM, workforce and entrepreneurship. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at Amazon / AWS who handles partnerships related to AI, cloud, STEM, workforce and entrepreneurship. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; AWS/skills activation concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                                    |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not contact multiple AWS/Amazon units with conflicting asks.

Escalate immediately when: Referral to appropriate social-impact/education team, meeting or major in-kind offer.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

12. Salesforce

Recommended subject: Future-ready youth + measurable community problem-solving

Verified alignment to research before sending: education, workforce, nonprofit technology and employee engagement.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of Salesforce specifically because of its work around education, workforce, nonprofit technology and employee engagement. Our program is creating an opportunity for a scalable student challenge combining real-world problem solving, career skills and community impact.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at Salesforce, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to Salesforce is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in education, workforce, nonprofit technology and employee engagement.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at Salesforce.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching Salesforce because of its work in education, workforce, nonprofit technology and employee engagement. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at Salesforce who handles partnerships related to education, workforce, nonprofit technology and employee engagement. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; mentor/technology activation concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                             |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not assume Salesforce.org is the correct current route without verification.

Escalate immediately when: Global impact/philanthropy referral, meeting or proposal request.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

13. PepsiCo / PepsiCo Foundation

Recommended subject: Youth problem-solving for stronger communities and local economies

Verified alignment to research before sending: youth, food systems, workforce and community opportunity.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of PepsiCo / PepsiCo Foundation specifically because of its work around youth, food systems, workforce and community opportunity. Our program is creating an opportunity for students engaging local businesses and communities to identify challenges around affordability, opportunity and neighborhood well-being.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at PepsiCo / PepsiCo Foundation, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to PepsiCo / PepsiCo Foundation is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in youth, food systems, workforce and community opportunity.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at PepsiCo / PepsiCo Foundation.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching PepsiCo / PepsiCo Foundation because of its work in youth, food systems, workforce and community opportunity. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at PepsiCo / PepsiCo Foundation who handles partnerships related to youth, food systems, workforce and community opportunity. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; community/food-system concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                                    |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not force a food-access angle if the current priority does not fit.

Escalate immediately when: Foundation/corporate-affairs referral, executive meeting or major product/cash discussion.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

14. Mastercard

Recommended subject: Financial inclusion + the next generation of problem-solvers
Verified alignment to research before sending: financial inclusion, digital economy and entrepreneurship.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of Mastercard specifically because of its work around financial inclusion, digital economy and entrepreneurship. Our program is creating an opportunity for students learning business, financial and digital-economy skills through direct community problem solving.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at Mastercard, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to Mastercard is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in financial inclusion, digital economy and entrepreneurship.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at Mastercard.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching Mastercard because of its work in financial inclusion, digital economy and entrepreneurship. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at Mastercard who handles partnerships related to financial inclusion, digital economy and entrepreneurship. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; financial/digital skills concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                                 |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not imply affiliation with Mastercard's Center for Inclusive Growth until confirmed.

Escalate immediately when: Center/community referral, meeting or $50K+ opportunity.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

15. Visa

Recommended subject: Financial literacy + youth entrepreneurship through real-world learning

Verified alignment to research before sending: financial literacy, digital commerce and small business.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of Visa specifically because of its work around financial literacy, digital commerce and small business. Our program is creating an opportunity for students interviewing businesses, understanding economic challenges and developing practical solutions.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at Visa, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to Visa is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in financial literacy, digital commerce and small business.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at Visa.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching Visa because of its work in financial literacy, digital commerce and small business. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at Visa who handles partnerships related to financial literacy, digital commerce and small business. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; financial-literacy activation concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                            |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not imply access to Visa merchant data or networks.

Escalate immediately when: Social-impact referral, meeting or proposal request.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

16. Accenture

Recommended subject: AI-era skills + student workforce readiness
Verified alignment to research before sending: AI, skills, workforce and entrepreneurship.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of Accenture specifically because of its work around AI, skills, workforce and entrepreneurship. Our program is creating an opportunity for students building communication, AI, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills through real-world community assignments.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at Accenture, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to Accenture is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in AI, skills, workforce and entrepreneurship.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at Accenture.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching Accenture because of its work in AI, skills, workforce and entrepreneurship. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at Accenture who handles partnerships related to AI, skills, workforce and entrepreneurship. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; employee mentor/skills concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                                   |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not frame pro bono consulting as guaranteed.

Escalate immediately when: Corporate-citizenship referral, meeting or significant skills/cash opportunity.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

17. Deloitte

Recommended subject: Youth leadership + workforce readiness through problem-solving

Verified alignment to research before sending: education, workforce and business skills.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of Deloitte specifically because of its work around education, workforce and business skills. Our program is creating an opportunity for a practical youth-development model where students research, interview, analyze and present solutions.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at Deloitte, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to Deloitte is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in education, workforce and business skills.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at Deloitte.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching Deloitte because of its work in education, workforce and business skills. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at Deloitte who handles partnerships related to education, workforce and business skills. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; mentor/pro bono concept after interest, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                           |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not imply Deloitte Foundation eligibility without verification.

Escalate immediately when: Purpose/foundation referral, executive meeting or formal proposal.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

18. New York Life

Recommended subject: New York youth opportunity + education + community impact

Verified alignment to research before sending: youth, education and community.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of New York Life specifically because of its work around youth, education and community. Our program is creating an opportunity for students across New York developing confidence, leadership and real-world problem-solving skills.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at New York Life, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to New York Life is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in youth, education and community.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at New York Life.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching New York Life because of its work in youth, education and community. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at New York Life who handles partnerships related to youth, education and community. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; youth/education partnership concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                              |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not assume current foundation priorities or grant access.

Escalate immediately when: Foundation/community referral, NY executive meeting or proposal request.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

19. Northwell Health

Recommended subject: Student problem-solving + future healthcare careers in New York

Verified alignment to research before sending: community health, workforce and healthcare careers.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of Northwell Health specifically because of its work around community health, workforce and healthcare careers. Our program is creating an opportunity for students identifying community challenges while gaining exposure to healthcare careers and local health needs.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at Northwell Health, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to Northwell Health is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in community health, workforce and healthcare careers.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at Northwell Health.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching Northwell Health because of its work in community health, workforce and healthcare careers. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at Northwell Health who handles partnerships related to community health, workforce and healthcare careers. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; healthcare-career activation concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                             |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not make medical claims or imply access to patients/data.

Escalate immediately when: Community/workforce referral, meeting or health-specific activation request.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

20. Delta Air Lines

Recommended subject: Youth workforce readiness + transformative winner experiences

Verified alignment to research before sending: education, workforce, aviation careers and travel.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of Delta Air Lines specifically because of its work around education, workforce, aviation careers and travel. Our program is creating an opportunity for students building career skills through community problem-solving, with potential aviation-career and winner/teacher experiences.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at Delta Air Lines, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to Delta Air Lines is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in education, workforce, aviation careers and travel.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at Delta Air Lines.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching Delta Air Lines because of its work in education, workforce, aviation careers and travel. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at Delta Air Lines who handles partnerships related to education, workforce, aviation careers and travel. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; travel/airfare concept after cash discussion, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                     |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not lead only with free tickets; cash partnership is primary where appropriate.

Escalate immediately when: Community-engagement meeting, cash discussion or substantial airfare offer.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

21. T-Mobile

Recommended subject: Connectivity + digital skills for student problem-solvers

Verified alignment to research before sending: digital inclusion, connectivity and youth opportunity.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of T-Mobile specifically because of its work around digital inclusion, connectivity and youth opportunity. Our program is creating an opportunity for students using digital tools to research, communicate and solve real community problems.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at T-Mobile, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to T-Mobile is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in digital inclusion, connectivity and youth opportunity.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at T-Mobile.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching T-Mobile because of its work in digital inclusion, connectivity and youth opportunity. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at T-Mobile who handles partnerships related to digital inclusion, connectivity and youth opportunity. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; connectivity/device activation concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                           |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not imply current grant eligibility.

Escalate immediately when: Community-impact referral, meeting or major device/connectivity discussion.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

22. Target

Recommended subject: Youth development + workforce readiness through community impact

Verified alignment to research before sending: youth development, workforce development and local community giving.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of Target specifically because of its work around youth development, workforce development and local community giving. Our program is creating an opportunity for students building leadership and workforce skills while improving their communities.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at Target, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to Target is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in youth development, workforce development and local community giving.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at Target.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching Target because of its work in youth development, workforce development and local community giving. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at Target who handles partnerships related to youth development, workforce development and local community giving. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send for grant lane: required application materials; for corporate lane: one-page overview after interest, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not present the $1K-$15K Community Engagement Funds lane as a $50K-$100K grant.

Escalate immediately when: Any broader corporate referral, major partnership discussion, or grant application issue.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

23. Walmart / Walmart.org

Recommended subject: Student opportunity + stronger local communities

Verified alignment to research before sending: community opportunity, workforce and broad local reach.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of Walmart / Walmart.org specifically because of its work around community opportunity, workforce and broad local reach. Our program is creating an opportunity for students working directly with neighborhood businesses and communities to develop solutions and future-ready skills.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at Walmart / Walmart.org, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to Walmart / Walmart.org is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in community opportunity, workforce and broad local reach.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at Walmart / Walmart.org.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching Walmart / Walmart.org because of its work in community opportunity, workforce and broad local reach. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at Walmart / Walmart.org who handles partnerships related to community opportunity, workforce and broad local reach. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; local/national partnership concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                               |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not assume local and national giving programs have the same rules.

Escalate immediately when: Walmart.org/community referral, major meeting or proposal invitation.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

24. NVIDIA

Recommended subject: AI-era student problem-solving + STEM opportunity

Verified alignment to research before sending: AI, STEM and future workforce.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of NVIDIA specifically because of its work around AI, STEM and future workforce. Our program is creating an opportunity for students learning how to think, build and solve problems in an AI-driven economy.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at NVIDIA, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to NVIDIA is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in AI, STEM and future workforce.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at NVIDIA.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching NVIDIA because of its work in AI, STEM and future workforce. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at NVIDIA who handles partnerships related to AI, STEM and future workforce. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; AI/STEM activation concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                                       |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not overstate technical depth of the program; describe actual student activities accurately.

Escalate immediately when: Education/CSR referral, executive meeting or major AI/STEM opportunity.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

25. Adobe

Recommended subject: Creativity + digital storytelling for student solutions

Verified alignment to research before sending: creativity, digital skills and education.

FIRST EMAIL

Hello [Name],

I'm reaching out on behalf of the Student Impact Challenge, a New York student initiative that gives young people a practical way to build leadership, entrepreneurship and problem-solving skills by engaging with real businesses and community challenges.

I thought of Adobe specifically because of its work around creativity, digital skills and education. Our program is creating an opportunity for students researching problems and communicating solutions through video, design, presentations and digital storytelling.

We are currently developing a select group of corporate partnerships for the Challenge and would value a brief conversation to determine whether there may be alignment with your team. If this sits with someone else at Adobe, I would also appreciate being pointed to the appropriate person.

Would you be open to a 15-20 minute conversation in the coming days?

Best,
[Fellow Name]
Student Fellow, Student Impact Challenge

FOLLOW-UP #1

Hello [Name],

I wanted to follow up on my note regarding the Student Impact Challenge. The reason I reached out to Adobe is the potential connection between our students' real-world problem-solving experience and your work in creativity, digital skills and education.

If helpful, I can send a concise overview. I'd also be grateful for a referral if another colleague handles partnerships of this kind.

Best,
[Fellow Name]

FOLLOW-UP #2

Hello [Name],

One final follow-up regarding the Student Impact Challenge. We are organizing our first group of corporate conversations now, and I wanted to make sure I had reached the right team at Adobe.

If there is a more appropriate contact or formal pathway for education, youth, workforce or community partnerships, would you mind pointing me in the right direction?

Thank you,
[Fellow Name]

LINKEDIN MESSAGE

Hi [Name] — I'm part of the Student Impact Challenge team in New York. We're helping students build real-world problem-solving, leadership and entrepreneurship skills through community and business challenges. I'm researching Adobe because of its work in creativity, digital skills and education. I'd appreciate connecting and learning who handles partnerships in this area.

PHONE OPENING

"Hi, my name is [Name] and I'm calling with the Student Impact Challenge. We're a New York student initiative focused on real-world problem-solving, leadership and career skills. I'm trying to identify the person at Adobe who handles partnerships related to creativity, digital skills and education. Could you point me to the right team?"

| If they say...             | Fellow response                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| "Send information."        | Thank them, confirm the best email, send one-page overview; creative-skills/software concept, log it in CRM and set a follow-up date.                                                                 |
| "What are you asking for?" | Explain that the team is exploring a corporate partnership and wants first to understand alignment. If the contact is qualified and asks for a number, use the approved account strategy or escalate. |
| "No budget."               | Ask whether timing is the issue, whether another team is appropriate, and whether a relevant in-kind or future-cycle pathway exists.                                                                  |
| "Not my department."       | Thank them and ask for the correct team/contact rather than continuing the pitch.                                                                                                                     |

What NOT to say: Do not make software access promises before Adobe confirms support.

Escalate immediately when: Social-impact/education referral, meeting or significant software/cash opportunity.

Before sending: Replace every bracketed field; verify the recipient and program; add one current, specific sentence showing why this person/company is being contacted; remove any statement you cannot substantiate.

WHEN THE PROSPECT SAYS: “YES, LET’S MEET”

Do not continue selling by email. Confirm the meeting, thank the prospect, identify attendees, ask whether there is anything specific they want covered, update the CRM and prepare an executive account brief. For Top 25 opportunities, management decides whether the founder should attend.

WHEN THE PROSPECT SAYS: “SEND A PROPOSAL ”

A proposal request is an escalation point, not permission to send a generic sponsorship deck. Confirm the prospect's interests, approximate level if appropriate, decision process, deadline and required format. Major proposals receive leadership review before delivery.

MESSAGE QUALITY CHECK — 10 POINTS

| Pts | Standard                             |
|-----|--------------------------------------|
| 2   | Specific to the organization/contact |
| 2   | Current alignment verified           |
| 1   | Program explained accurately         |
| 1   | Clear, low-friction CTA              |
| 1   | No unsupported claims                |
| 1   | Appropriate attachment decision      |
| 1   | Professional tone and grammar        |
| 1   | CRM next action/date ready           |

A message scoring below 8/10 should be revised before it is sent to a Tier A account.

NEXT DOCUMENT

Document 46 — Executive Meeting & $100K+ Closing Playbook. The next document should govern discovery calls, founder preparation, meeting agendas, high-value asks, proposal transitions, objections, negotiation, follow-up, approval and closing for major corporate partnerships.

PROGRAM CONTACT

Frantz Coutard

Founder, Student Impact Challenge

Founder & President, TrendCatch Gives Back Inc.

Email: Info@frantzcoutard.com

Cell: 516-697-6962

Website: FrantzCoutard.com