100 BEAUTY, PERSONAL CARE, TELEVISION & MEDIA PARTNER TARGETS

Makeup • Skincare • Acne Care • Hair • Beard & Grooming • TV Networks • New York TV • Radio • Digital Media

Purpose: Expand Student Impact Challenge outreach into beauty/personal-care companies and television/media organizations. Beauty prospects can support scholarships, products, career exposure, entrepreneurship, STEM/beauty science and student experiences. Media prospects should generally be approached first for awareness, storytelling and community reach, not simply for money.

Important: These are prospecting targets, not confirmed partners. Fellows must verify current programs, ownership, contacts and outreach policies before contacting them. Editorial coverage must never be promised or treated as something that can be purchased through a community-partnership request.

How to Approach Beauty & Personal-Care Companies

Lead with youth opportunity, entrepreneurship, career exposure, product science, creativity and confidence. For skincare/acne brands, avoid messaging that stigmatizes young people or implies that appearance determines self-worth. Product donations should be age-appropriate and approved before distribution. Large beauty companies may be appropriate for CASH conversations; individual brands may be stronger IN-KIND prospects.

How to Approach Television & Media

The first ask should usually be awareness: help families learn that registration is open, consider the initiative for a community/education story, invite program leadership for an interview, or direct the fellow to the appropriate community-affairs or assignment-desk contact. Keep editorial requests separate from paid sponsorship discussions. Never imply that coverage is guaranteed because a company sponsors or partners with the program.
